

Abstract:

Diploma work is focused on history of Česká Sibiř in time between world wars. Česká Sibiř is the name of an area located on the border of Central and Southern Bohemia, it belongs to larger part called Podblanicko. Česká Sibiř has several delimitations. This work focuses mainly on selected villages in Česká Sibiř, namely Miličín, Záhoří, Malovice, Petrovice and their settlements.

The main goal of this work is to describe everyday life of residents and the days in villages in time between world wars. Work will be dealing with local politics, economy, social conditions and their association. Also what must not be missed out in this work, are prominent people of this region. The beginning of the work is dedicated to journalist Jan Herben, to whom goes attribute for bringing origin of name. Here he built his family residence. Another important topic of my Diploma work is local nature with harsh climate to which carries name of its entire region. The work will reflect further development of this region and its population to this day.

The work includes didactic part. In this part, I'll strive to use historical knowledge taught in primary school, particularly tuition of regional history. This work will therefore touch on the subject matter regarding day-to-day history, regional history, homeland history and geography and also didactics of history.
