This thesis deals with the problem of generating short articles about past tennis singles from structured data. Articles are generated by using templates heuristically obtained from the original news articles. The result of this thesis is a template database and a graphic application which using these templates for given input generates corresponding short articles. This thesis also includes evaluation of the application outputs which shows that 64% of the generated texts are correct.