

ABSTRACT

This diploma thesis deals with the dynamic changes of the street terminology system in the town of Melník from the second half of the 19th century to the present. There are cases where it is necessary to study, which are located under the field of historical toponomastics, respecting its parts that have urbanonymy. The works carry out, show and analyze the issue of street names that move in the town of Melník during the period under review.

The work is in five places, the first part of which consists of analysis and heuristics, which allows the analysis of documents, especially documents that are focused on documents that are part of the Melník archive and Archive of Department of Construction and Development of the Municipal Office in Mělník. Remember that you keep in mind the city councils, you write down the city's national committee, letters etc. The second chapter, which is part of the subchapter by period, lists historical developments that have urban and significant changes. The third place is the municipal toponomastic analysis of Melník street terminology from the point of view of basic onymic functions of urban names and from the point of view of the use of honorification names. The next chapter consists of a name interpretative list of individual street names, in which chronological data about name changes and an explanation of their motivation for naming in history are stored. The last part of the thesis is devoted to consideration and urbanonyms as a means of preserving historical memory.

The outcome of this work is a comprehensive case study designed to support or refute the general procedures of street name processing and its genesis. Which goals are mostly usable analysis of common sources and comparison of period maps and photographs.
