Course of defence: The student presented the main findings of his thesis "The Role of Institutional Change in the Turkish Economic Growth Under AKP Governance". He examined the specific nature of Turkey's political institutions in terms of the recent authoritarian turn. After that he proceeded to conclusions, showing the negative effect of the AKP policy after 2007 on the quality of economic growth. In the second part, the commission read the examiners' reports. The student was asked to defend the methodological choice of comparing the two selected time periods where the analysis could be potentially influenced by the global economic crisis. The student further explained his argument, where he stressed the changes in the internal power structure of AKP.
