

This graduation thesis covers the questions of inclusion of Anglicisms in vocabulary of Russian and Czech languages. The analysis of thematic groups and interesting facts of word loan and their inclusion into lexicon of Czech and Russian languages was done. The work aims mainly at comparison of English word adoption in both languages in terms of time of word loan and frequency of use of new lexical units as well as at detection and description of the methods of such adoption and analysis of related problems.