

Abstract

This bachelor thesis is focused on possibilities of spending free time and availability of free time activities in industrial town Mladá Boleslav. The main aim of this thesis is to evaluate the activities that are available in the town and the quality of the free time activities offered to different groups of inhabitants of the town - from children to unregistered agency workers working in large industrial factories. The conclusion concentrates on possible improvement of these activities in the future. To achieve the stated aims different methods are used. The methods include reasearch of literature specialized in history, development and philosophical ideas connected to free time, field data collection in the form of mapping of the important locations, work with publicly available resources and data collected from structure interviews. All data used in this thesis were collected by the author himself and data of Czech statistical office and Municipality of the town Mladá Boleslav were added as well. The thesis concludes that there is a great amount of free time activities available. However, the town should focus on better multicultural connection among the citizens living in Mladá Boleslav.
