

Summary

The bachelor's thesis deals with risks in adolescence. The theoretical part of this thesis is divided into three chapters. The first chapter focuses on the adolescent period and changes that occur during this period. Pubescence can be one of the factors of risky behavior. The second chapter characterizes risky behavior. We will focus on family as one of the factors of risky behaviors. The third chapter is aimed at low-threshold facilities for children and youth. In this chapter we can find general characteristics, the principle of low-threshold service and its description and particular methods of its work.

The practical part describes the chosen methodology and presents the results of interviews with social workers. The practical part focuses on the current forms of risky behaviors and the method and possible ways to help.

Keywords

adolescence, pubescence, risks, risky behavior, forms of risky behavior, low-threshold for children and youth