

Summary

The bachelor's thesis is dedicated to „Interdisciplinary social health work with clients of the Centrum metadonové substituce Drop In“. The work is divided into theoretical and empirical part. The aim of the theoretical part is to describe the current situation on the drug scene and clearly define the importance of interdisciplinarity in substitution treatment. The empirical part shows a case study of work with the client of the Centrum metadonové substituce Drop In, o.p.s (Methadone Substitution Center). The aim is to point out the greater need for individual interdisciplinary work with the client in Centrum metadonové substituce Drop In, o.p.s.
