Course of defence: The committee chair commenced the defence by inviting the student to summarise the key aspects of his thesis. The student then succinctly discussed the main objective of his research, its theoretical framework, the methodological approach as well as the key findings he arrived at in a very structured manner, highlighting the possible impact of his conclusions in the security domain. The chair pointed at the complex quality of the student's discussion and asked the other committee members to pose their questions. The student answered the questions about the policy implications of his research and further explicated the research conclusions. The chair thanked the student and formally concluded the examination session.
