

Abstract (in English):

This bachelor's thesis deals with the topic of media education and its importance in a society that is struggling with disinformation. The first part of the thesis focuses on the theory and describes what mass media are and what effect they have on people. The thesis also deals with disinformation and related phenomena, media literacy and critical thinking. Several organizations and projects dealing with media education are also mentioned in the thesis. The practical part will answer research questions about media education from the teachers' point of view through semi-structured interviews. The aim of the work was to find out whether media education is integrated into teaching at all and possibly in what way, and how challenging it is for teachers to teach media education these days.
