ABSTRAKT:

The central idea of this bachelor's thesis is the personality, life and mission of Sister Maria Laetitia Milada Popelova from the Order of Saint Voršila. The thesis focuses mainly on the period when she could devote herself to catechetical and pastoral activities. The thesis will reflect on her approach based on developments in the Catholic Church in the field of catechesis. Testimonies of witnesses and chronicles of the sisters of the Order of Saint Voršila will be used during the research.

The first chapter deals with catechesis and its development, especially during the period of active activity of Sister Laetitia in this area. It reflects the state of catechesis based on the work of Sister Consilia Nováková from the Order of St. Voršila. Both sisters worked in essentially the same period and in the same community of Voršila sisters, only the places sometimes passed. The second source for learning about the state and perspective of catechesis at the time of the sisters' work are church documents. Approaches are formulated from them, with which I will compare the work of Sister Laetitia Milady Popelová.

In the second chapter, the life of Sister Laetitia Milady Popelova is presented based on her biographical data on her education, work activities and religious life.

The third chapter forms the core of the work. It discusses Sister Laetitia's work as a catechist, especially in Chlumec nad Cidlinou and its surroundings, and also in Prague, where she ended her work due to a serious illness, and where she died.

At the end of the work, a reflection of Sister Laetitia's catechetical activity is made based on the approach of church documents to catechesis valid at the time of her work.
