

Abstract

Name and surname of the author: Anna Asszonyi

Institution: Charles University
Faculty of Medicine in Hradec Králové
Department of non-medical studies

Title: Violence against women in Covid-19 pandemic

Supervisor: prof. PhDr. Jiří Mareš, CSc.

Number of pages: 87

Year of defense: 2023

The bachelor thesis, "Domestic violence against women in the time of the Covid-19 pandemic", deals in the theoretical part with the issue of domestic violence within families and the possibilities of helping women, its victims. It provides basic information on domestic violence, its forms and causes, dynamics and consequences, not only on women but also on children. A significant part of the bachelor thesis focuses on the necessity of professional approach and procedure of medical and non-medical personnel in the process of interdisciplinary cooperation towards victims of domestic violence.

In the research part, the bachelor's thesis tries to delve into the issue of domestic violence from the perspective of five women of different ages who have experienced domestic violence, including during quarantine. Using narrative interviews, it records their life stories and maps the ways in which they themselves try to resolve their situation.

Keywords: violence against women, Covid – 19, syndrom, quarantine, domestic abuse, aggressor, victim