

Abstract

Title: Comparing hockey clubs across the Europe and their work with the youth (Organization, the content of the practise proces, personnel and material security and more)

Objectives: The aim of my bachelor's thesis is to find out and compare terms and methodology of clubs for the development and upbringing of youth hockey players in selected countris in Europe

Methods: In my work, I used the method of qualitative research, which took place in the form of filling in pre-consulted tables, in which data from five clubs in Europe were evaluated and compared.

Results: It was found that all of the teams have relatively similar working conditions for work with youth, but each teams offers different benefits for the development of their members. Thanks to the openness of the clubs we compared a large number of interesting factors that can give clubs a good feedback for improve or create their own conception for work with the youth.
