Work has to enlarge student's knowledge about design and programming of interpreters. Student will use advanced programming techniques and tools commonly used in compilers. Target of work is creating interpreter that process subset of Pascal programming language. Its design is object oriented and easily extensible. Goal of this work is create platform for future development. Student will study existing virtual machines used in other interpreters and create own simple virtual machine and instruction set.