

Bachelor work “Working conditions of women providing paid sexual services in the Czech Republic, with concentration on the clients of nongovernmental organization (NGO) Rozkoš bez Rizika (Bliss without risk) working in the Prague sex clubs”, concerns about female prostitution from the point of view of working conditions and takes notice of some respective influencing factors.

The thesis refers about different sights on problems of commercial sex, taking the view points from unordinary directions; effort of recognition of work with the aim to get the same working conditions, rights and protection, like in any other work areas, and on the other hand, describing commercial sex as violence against women, that can not be considered as work itself.

It takes insight to the spheres of social work in relation to individuals, who offer paid sexual services. More further, areas that can be included in working condition of sexual workers and some factors that can influence these conditions are described. One of the important factors is the government policy regarding prostitution, where contemporary and proposed legislation impact at working conditions, is considered. Thesis describes working environment of sexual workers, lists the diversifications and risks that result from this environment.

A quantitative survey has been used, to find out the environment the environment of Prague sex clubs in more detailed description. Informants of this survey are all clients of NGO R-R, and that is the survey is the first digging deeper in this area. Survey done also monitors legal and labour rights and duties, hygienic and security conditions and workers satisfaction with given conditions.

Generally spoken, the thesis puts through author`s theory and practice, that the author congregated during the outreach work and social work with women offering paid sexual services in R-R NGO.
