

The goal of this thesis is to design new structure of corpus, whose data won't be accessible for users, so that users can't specifically develop their compression algorithms focused on reaching good results in measured parameters. Next point of requirements is to develop test application, which will be able to test programs (algorithms) using designed corpus and store results of tests for creating complex statistic feedback of tested programs. Feedback will be accessible for signed users.