

In this diploma thesis I was trying to join the topic of attachment and domestic violence, consequences of the domestic violence and influence on the attachment and inner working models.

In the theoretical part I focused on the attachment description, types of attachment to the childhood and adult age. The relations parallel in childhood and adult age are described.

In the empiric part, using the research, I decided to confirm or disprove some of the hypothesis, which I determined for evaluation of the domestic violence results and negative childhood experiences of the victim.

The research relatively clearly confirmed that the negative experiences with the solicitous people from the childhood have an impact on the partnership in the adult age and children education.

This thesis can be a contribution for the specialist working with the victims of domestic violence, and at exer citation of the new approaches to this problem.
