Conclusion: In the training process, it is important for players to go through the situations that arise in matches and to understand how to solve them and, most importantly, why to solve them. It is recommended to incorporate more video analysis into the training sessions based on the results found, when dealing with new tactical instructions and to more individualize the game situations. In the training process, we should rather focus on explaining team synergy to individual player positions and increasing the game courage in these situations. The only way to increase the courage is for the player to experience the situation not only in matches but also regularly in the training process.
