

Abstract

The bachelor's thesis provides a commentary on those parts of the Theological Summa of Thomas Aquinas, which relate to the last goal of man, the state of bliss, and tries to update these questions to make Thomas' ideas and philosophy of bliss accessible to today's man.

In the introduction, a brief biography of Tomáš Aquinas is presented, which aims to make the context available to the reader. At the same time, the basic starting points of his work Theological Sum are analyzed.

In the second part of the thesis, there is a commentary on the individual articles of the sum as conceived as an explanation of Tomáš's thoughts and the presentation of concrete examples.
