The task of my work was to study the possibilities of the modern multiplex method - Luminex xMAP technology on the field of immunoanalysis with focus on measurement of cytokines, growth factors, adhesive molecules and other novel biomarker levels in various biologic fluids for clinical research and its possible use in clinical practise with focus on cancer applications.