

The main aim of presented work is to evaluate the importance of standardized echography in the diagnosis of uveal melanoma and in terms of determining the prognosis important morphological features in vivo.