Title of dissertation : Establishing trust-based relationships between action research participants.....

Author of dissertation : Samara Savandra

Evaluator : Doc. Dr. Radka Wildová, CSc.

The dissertation is focused on trust – based relationships between action research participants. The aim of the dissertation is very actual in the framework of the transformation process in education.

The submitted dissertation is logically structured into eight chapters, bibliography and appendixes. The author has demonstrated the ability of sophisticated reflection of reviewed literature based on her practice.

The theoretical part of the dissertation is well structured, using appropriate and up to date literature.

The aim of research has been changed due to a present situation and condition of the school. The author of the dissertation has been able to modify the methods and the organization of the action research according to the conditions of the chosen school. The collected data are valuable and very interesting. The qualitative analysis are well used for the conclusion of the dissertation.

The author of the dissertation has been able to demonstrate critical understanding of a specific method of research – action research. She also has presented enhanced communicative skills, through the presentation, sustaining, organization and explication of an argument together with the ability being very independent, initiative, flexible and self – confident in learning through research- based activities.

The questions for the discussion are : „ Are there any limits for using of the action research at the school?“, „ Are there any ways how to support the trust based-relationships between action research participants?“

The dissertation presents a very good level of the ability to solve the problems in theoretical and practical way.
