

Summary

The Impact of Employment on the Quality of life of Clients in Supported Housing for People with Intellectual Disabilities.

The diploma thesis deals with the influence of employment on the quality of life of clients of sheltered housing for people with mental disabilities. The aim of this thesis is to find out whether employing these clients has an impact on their quality of life. The theoretical part of the thesis presents knowledge related to the issue of intellectual disability, the development of society's approach to people with disabilities, their employment, social services, and the concept of quality of life in the context of intellectual disability. In the practical part, the results of qualitative research are interpreted, which was carried out in the form of a semi-structured interview with clients of sheltered housing. The analysis of the research results brings findings regarding the influence of employment on the quality of life of clients of sheltered housing for people with intellectual disabilities, which complement the knowledge presented in the theoretical part.
