

The main objective of this study is to describe the changes that tourism industry has made because of the terrorist activities around the world. Further to study impacts that terrorist attacks have had on tourism and try to find a possibility how to prevent and minimize the negative impacts of terrorism. The study method is bibliographic search of literature and internet sources. Egypt has been chosen as a case study because in this country there are big impacts of terrorism on tourism industry. The study highlights the main motivation factors that affect tourists when they choose their holiday destination. It indicates that tourism is highly resistant industry. Final part deals with crisis management, the possibility how to prevent crisis and how to reduce their impacts.