Abstract

This diploma thesis provides comparison of the termination of employment relationship in the Czech Republic and in the UK. Within both legal systems this thesis focus on termination of employment relationship based on legal actions of the participants of the employment relationship as well as based on legal situations independent on the will of the participants of the employment relationship. This thesis also analyses sources of employment law in the UK and it provides an overview of the complex judiciary system in the British employment law matters.