

After finding a serious disease with a person's life completely changed. ill one must abandon much of their previous life. Due to disease progression and treatment must leave or reduce their working lives, the way of leisure time varies considerably and relationships with family and friends. From day to day usual way of life in uncertainty. A sick man who is afraid of its life, suddenly finds himself in an unfamiliar hospital environment, where they must comply -established rules, undergoing treatment are often uncomfortable and restrict their rights to privacy and intimacy. The patient in his uncertainty is dependent on staff that takes care of him. If not sufficiently informed about their health, or to staff it behaves insensitively, which patients in Czech hospitals still perceive there may be a kind of iatrogenic damage patients with adverse consequences for his mental condition which may persist even after treatment.