

Abstract

This theses, called „Chances and restrains in social worker’s profession in Ústí region“ is dealing with social worker’s profession in self-government context. It’s setting off social workers from non-profit organizations. During beginning it’s talking about theoretical basis, inevitably bound with social work’s field, with focusing on social worker as part of assisting profession. It is, in particular, about opportunities or on the contrary about restrains/limits/barriers, which affects this field of specific self-governing area – Štětí city. Concretely it is about participants, which have here influence on life of local people/potential clients. All under surveillance of superior agency – higher self-government area – social work’s methodologists of Ústí region. Research part of this thesis is based on semi-structured interview of previously mentioned participants, which gives overlook how each and every one of them sees limitations in practical social work’s overlooks.