

There exists different approaches on database modeling. This work tries to identify strengths and weaknesses of nowadays technologies. Besides relational databases, object oriented databases, and methods to combine the world of objects with the world of tables of relational databases. Last part gives attention to design of methodology of process of development of information systems using technology that implements object access to the data throw build on relational database facilities .