

In my dissertation I am focusing on home violence issue which I tried to explore especially from incidence on children perspective. In the theoretical part I am explaining conception of home violence itself then it is followed by defining cognitive characteristics of home violence and its forms and appearance in the society. Another part is devoted to the myth about domestic violence that occurs between people and affects the social and pedagogical work with victims, offenders and of course the children themselves. I am also mentioning the personality of victim and personality of offender and I am focusing on social – psychological level of perception of home violence. Another chapter is consecrating to pedagogical aspects to this issue. I am also shortly outlining legislative referring to home violence and I am defining possibilities of governmental and nongovernmental institution to help with emphasis on their specifics.

In the practical part I was researching development of family relationships in 3 families trough the case studies. I observed a connection between intervention focused on decomposition of home violence phenomenon and its results. The objective was to find out how the home violence in families influenced children and which were the optimal work methods which would eliminate the negative impact on them.
