

The goal of this thesis is to develop a Java MIDP application for automatic reconstruction of the diacritics in Czech and Slovak texts. The application is intended for mobile devices and the size of the statistical model must meet the limitations imposed by the devices. A separate Java application will create the model files used by the mobile application. The size of the model can be adjusted to fit a specific device.