

This thesis aims on the design and implementation of a system for harvesting, watching and change analysis of pages on chosen web servers in particular domain according to parameters setting. The system is able to recognize changes independently on the used language, as well as evaluate relevancy of the changes. The system is optimized for parallel processing of provided operations.