

This dissertation paper analyzes the spiritual services within the law enforcement organizations of the Czech Republic, the specialized biblical and theoretical foundation of such services, the historical frame of the Church entering the law enforcement, the problems of curing psychological stress in law enforcement jobs, and the spiritual services currently rendered to the law enforcement officers. The conclusion summarizes the information processed and examines the future development of the issues involving the spiritual care rendered to the law enforcement officers under the provisions of a modern society.