

My diploma thesis is a summary of the information's, which were after discussion with relevant religious leaders considered as important to record like presentation, which is presented like opinion evidence in the following subject lines. I divided my work into three main sections - historical development, legal development and dogmatic development of the Apostolic Church in Slovakia. The entire discourse about the Apostolic Church is preceded by chapters about historical context, which include also its own history. The chapters present an abstract from period of the reformation, the evangelical awakening in the world and the historical background of the global Pentecostal movement. Before starting the chapter regarding the Apostolic Church, I'm writing about the influence of Pentecostal movements in the world.

History of the Apostolic Church is divided into subchapters, which capture and describe the life of the church in several time periods. I'm starting by bringing the Gospel form at the turn of the 20th century to the end of World War II. I'm continuing with period of repatriates to the Slovakia till the nationwide ACS conference in 1977. Other stages are describing the Church after the institution of the Central Council of elders, the Church and the Velvet Revolution, the Church and its service in the new millennium and the Life of the Church in 2009.

After history follows the dogmatic development of ACS what is divided into the phases of the time, but also into some thematic subchapters. At the beginning of dogmatic development of ACS I'm going shortly through theological development of the Assemblies of God.

My diploma thesis is closed with the legal development of the Apostolic Church in Slovakia. Also this third part of my thesis is divided into the time period mentioned above, which I also take into account by the historical development of the Apostolic Church.
