

The graduation theses considers the solutions to foster care in Austria. It describes the conditions for realisation of foster care in a given country, explains the preventive importance of ambulatory services for children, youth and their families and presents available forms of substantial care in institutions and family foster care. Practical part of my work demonstrates one of the available forms on an example of a particular institution. The aim of this work is a description of current system and presentation of principles of foster care in Austria, so that it could serve as a possible inspiration for development of foster care in the Czech Republic.
