

The village of Čejč lies in the south-east of Moravia. The village disappeared in the 15th century, but it was refounded in the end of the 18th century. The new inhabitants were French colonists arriving mainly from Franche-Comté and Lorraine. This thesis makes clear the circumstances of colonisation and searches for the "French heritage".