

This work deals with Hindi as the official language of India. It starts from its status as an official language as early as the colonial period. Also deals with various ideas for promoting Hindi as a national and later an official language of India. It analyses it in the Constitution and the State Languages Act, concisely the most important government agencies for the promotion and dissemination of Hindi. It also focuses on its application in everyday life, especially in education. Further outlines the issues that are related to its use as official language in non-hindi States and why their possible causes persist. The work is based on the laws governing the status and application of Hindi as well as various books and magazines resources and here and there on online resources.
