

In my thesis I deal with problems of employment for people with intellectual disabilities at a free labour market. This issue I discuss with a connection at a transition of students from practical schools to an employment, which isn't yet well sophisticated in my opinion, but very important for chances of assertion. Because in the Czech Republic an employment agenda deals with people with a health disability generally, I define the issue according to a new law number 435/2004. Also I deal with organisations which help via a service of supported employment not only to people with intellectual disabilities, but also to their employers. The next part of my thesis maps the particular work chances, which are offered to people with intellectual disabilities from the service of supported employment and which the people practise. And also I find out a public opinion about employing of people with intellectual disabilities. Advantages even disadvantages I find out via a mixed qualitative even quantitative research method. The aim of my diploma thesis is an assessment of a situation and a perspective of young people with with intellectual disabilities at free labour market, which opens then through the supported employment service and represents a chance of quality social assertion.
