

This graduation theses is concerned with the role of the media in the educational process when applied in a school environment. In particular this work is dealing with all aspects of Health education and associated issues. The graduation theses has been motivated by the key document Framework Education Programme for Elementary Education.

The aim of this research has been to find out how teachers of family or health education are using media in the educational context and whether they incorporate some aspects of media education within their lessons. Additionally it is intended to propose a format of model lessons that would become the basis and inspiration for delivery of the above subjects.
