

The bachelor's thesis occupies by employment policy, which forms one of the pillars of all-society considerations but also employment and unemployment on micro economical level. The author of this thesis is fully realizing the comprehensiveness of chosen theme and therefore regarding to the educational sight of the bachelor's programme, she has focused on selected aspects of the employment policy, with which among others nearly cohere the use of inhabitants and groups of citizens in labour market. The purpose of the thesis is to consider active and passive instruments of the employment policy in the Czech Republic and France. At the end of the work the author points out the coordination of the employment policy among membership countries in the EU and comparison of some partial differences and resemblances of the employment policy.