Moral and material satisfaction in civil law

The purpose of my thesis is to analyze the moral and material satisfaction in Czech civil law. I wanted to provide a deep interpretation of these institutes which represent an important phenomenon in our time. The importance of protection of personality increased in the 20th century in connection with development of human and personal rights. In last years also according to mass media and global society. My aim was not only to give the interpretation of basic institutes and instruments of protection of personality but also to show more extensive circumstances of this topic, set into relevant judicial cases and European aspects.

Chapter one attempts to provide an introduction to moral and material satisfaction.

Chapter two and three are denoted to the basic institutions relating to the protection of personality, moral and material satisfaction. They show the meaning of the institutions and also give readers the introduction to this problems.

Chapter four provides a brief introduction to the history of protection of personality. It is necessary to understand following interpretation. Deeply is focused on the period of time before 1989.

Chapter five is subdivided into four parts and provides the main informations of my thesis. Part one focuses on constitutional law which creates a basis for another law adjustment. Part two addresses the issue of criminal law and administrative law. Part three deals with civil law, it namely characterizes paragraph 13 of the Czech civil code which presents the most important part of the protection of personality in our law system and paragraph 444. Part four is concerned with special adjustment which is set in another laws.

Chapter six focuses on presumptions of remedying of protection of personality.

Chapter seven illustrates the aspects of time perspective.

Chapter eight presents the theme of my thesis according to a proposal of new Czech civil code.

Chapter nine recommends changes to be made in legislation.

Chapter ten gives the conclusion of my thesis.