In Search of the Traces of Selected "Prague-German" Writers (between 1873 and 1918) and their Relevance to the Teaching of German and Czech at Czech Secondary Schools

Abstract

This master thesis explores Prague's German-speaking literature from three different perspectives: educational, historical and geographical-historical. Instead of adopting a literary-scientific approach towards the topic, the dissertation looks into performance discussed concepts, definitions and also historical circumstances of Prague's German-speaking literature, which systematically presents the Prague residences from 1873 to 1918 of ten selected authors. The didactic part of the work responds to the questions of how teachers of secondary schools could teach the Prague German literature. The results of the work will be used to further didactic tasks and to create "literary walks through Prague for students and the larger public.
