

ANNOTATION – NEW EVANGELIZATION PROGRAMS

The intent of this thesis was to ascertain whether the two selected evangelization programs reflect the current situation in and the needs of the Church and society and whether they are able to pass the gospel comprehensibly and effectively. Selection of the programs was based on the conclusions of the Second Vatican Council and the most important post-council documents commenting on the topic of evangelization. The empirical part of the thesis deals with the course of the programs, one of which focuses on external evangelization and the other one on internal evangelization. The aim is to describe the tools used for evangelization and pastorate. Determined hypotheses are verified through a questionnaire ascertaining the effect of each program and the extent of their reception by both participants and organizers.
