

The graduation thesis „Influence of Sects on Classical Christianity“ with the subtitle „The Church of Jesus of Latter Day Saints and its Interaction with the Majoritarian Society in America“ is mapping the development of the newly arisen religious movement withing the North American continent. It is observing the mutual conflicts and benefits of the movement, and the American culture as well as the changes, that the American society has forced the movement to make. At the same time the thesis is observing the relationship of the majoritarian American Christian churches with the Latter Day Saints church and is also seeking to find influences, eventually conflict.
