

Master thesis analyzes attitude of Communist Party of Bohemia and Moravia (KSČM) towards Czech political system. Paper tries to investigate whether party can be still conceived as anti-systemic. Research concentrates mainly on its ideological doctrines, coalition potential and atmosphere inside the party. Conclusions are compared with the criteria of anti-systemic party by Giovanni Sartori. The possible conflicts between party's policy and law and order are analysed as an addition.