

Summary

Czech National Bank, its content operations and functions

This thesis deals with the legal status of the Czech National Bank, ie. the Central Bank Czech Republic and its activities and mission. Work focuses primarily on legal issues and issues related to the law deals only marginally economic and financial issues. The very existence of this institution and embedding based on Article 98 of the Constitution CR and other legal rules is contained in Law No. 6 / 1993 Coll., On the Czech National Bank.

Article 98, in addition to the definition of the Czech National Bank as the Central Bank of Czech Republic, provides the main objective of the CNB, which is price stability. For further adjustment refers to the Constitution of the State the law and further provides that the activities of the CNB are only permissible by law.

Act No. 6/1993Sb., on the Czech National Bank stipulates that the Czech National Bank is the administrative authority and that it is for the supervision of financial markets in the Czech Republic and other activities associated with this, such as to issue currency, support government economic policy, etc.

The second and third chapter are devoted to constitutional anchor CNB, respectively. CNB's independence, the Constitution of the CR results. There are discussed problems associated with the main objective of entrenching constitutional CNB board members appointed by the President of the Czech Republic, which the Constitution also grants the power to the CR. In the second chapter devoted to the independence of the CNB are discussed earlier attempts to its independence, the role of the Constitutional Court of the CR in its protection, but also the aspects that define this independence.

Chapter Four of this thesis is devoted to the organization and structure of the bank. There is discussed the issues of territorial scope, headquarters and branches of National Bank and other internal structure and organization. Part of this chapter is devoted to the Bank Board and other bodies National Bank and also fill up their activities. They also discussed aspects of determining, on what basis they are based, respectively. of what may be their very existence and activities conclude whether the law or regulation of lesser legal force.

Substantial, but not the only major, part of the thesis is the fifth chapter on the activities of the Czech National Bank. Are discussed, all legal aspects related to the main activity was the central bank CR, each group of tasks is analyzed and described, primarily on legal analysis rather than economic, of course, are outlined as well as some financial-economic aspects.

The sixth chapter examines the CNB, respectively. obligations associated with the laws of the CR, but there is also economically dealt with things such as major assets and liabilities.

Chapter 7 is devoted to administrative procedure brought authorities of the Czech National Bank.