

Diploma thesis „Diversification of export infrastructure in European direction as a basis for strengthening energy security of the Russian Federation “ are focused on Russian approach to the realization of energy infrastructure projects at first in European export direction. These thesis analyze current state of play of key Russian infrastructure projects in oil as well as gas sector and tray to point out all consequences connected with completion of this new infrastructure, which may affect current supply scheme for Europe, particularly for its central and eastern part. The Diploma thesis are based on large scale of literature and sources as well as on autor’s personal experiences with functioning of energy sector of Russia an other CIS countries.