

The author introduces in her final work the summary of complex care of patient with rupture of aneurysm of abdominal aortae in 6 case studies.

In comparison with different cases she introduces in summary the most important aspects of care, which can significantly influence the next prognosis of patient.

Similarly as the scheme of today vision of the world also the care about patient is global, complex and holistic. It is not possible to pass over in silence neither of factors of personality, disease, care system and hospital team. On the base of her long standing experience of nurse in acute attendant care in vascular surgery department, the author draws our attention on the main important moments of care of patient with life – threatened indisposition and indicates the way to the standardization of procedures, of course by observance of individual and empathic approach of sanitary staff.

Within work on project of final work the author except of her professional experience uses also scientific methods, as recognizing of reality and verification of hypothesis. (like secondary data analysis)