Bachelor's thesis is concentrated to the influence of pulmonary lobectomy to activities of daily living. The theoretical part brings up in general the pulmonary surgery and defines the individual activities of daily life necessary for the client's adequate reentry to ordinary life. The decision point of the thesis is composed by the quantitative analysis (questionnaire) about the influence of pulmonary lobectomy to activities of daily living in different time span. It aspires to map the severity of the clients to the complete self-sufficiency.

The examined sample is formed by 38 informants who in the Pardubice Regional Hospital a.s. had to undergo the operation and were in nurse there.
