Burn injury as a hard life situation, its different perception and managing , between women and men.

The baccalaureate thesis deals with burn injury as a hard life situation, its different perception and managing between women and men. Emphasis of the thesis is placed on a subjective and different perception and managing of the burn injury between interviewed men and women which were hospitalized. My interest was focused not only on the identification of the subjective perception of the burn injury, but also to determine differences in perception and managing the burn injury on the basis of used questionnaire method of examination. Emphasis of the thesis is formed by research investigation on the inpatient adult unit (department) at Burn Centre in Prague, Teaching hospital Královské Vinohrady. Purpose of this work is to compare differences of perception and managing hard life situation during burn injury between man and women, as well as to evaluate the subjective perception and managing of the burn injury on the selected population of patients.
