

This thesis dwells on usage of implicitly defined surfaces for modeling three-dimensional objects in computer graphics. At the beginning common approach to this kind of modeling tools is presented and its mathematical background is revealed. Then a documentation for BlobsEd editor follows which was developed to demonstrate basic capabilities of those tools to create various kinds of three-dimensional shapes and surfaces.